

OUR NEW AMBASSADOR TO GERMANY.

HON. DAVID JAYNE HILL, OF NEW YORK.

Novel Ice Cream Server.

An entirely new method of serving ice cream is the recent patent of a New York man. He abolishes the old system by means of a spoon. As shown in the illustration, this ice cream server is in the form of a cylinder, which is attached to a handle. Sliding within the handle and the cylinder are a piston and a plunger, so devised that the insertion of the instrument into the receptacle containing the ice cream will cause the receiver to be filled. Pressure upon the piston causes the contents of the cylinder to be expelled. The plunger is operated in a novel manner by means of a trigger which is set in the handle convenient for operation by the fingers of the operator.—Washington Star.

Democracy Under Foot.

One of the Ohio Congressmen tells the following as indicative of the pessimistic view of the average politician when in the throes of defeat:

The day after the routing of Parker in 1904 one of the Democratic newspapers in the Buckeye State sent out a circular telegram soliciting expressions of opinion from various politicians throughout the State. It is claimed that the quaintest of the lot was the report of one county chairman, expressed in these terms:

"County has gone for Roosevelt by 150. The people are in minority. Heaven help us!" — Philadelphia Ledger.

Insulated Screwdriver.

Working around electric wires with an ordinary screwdriver has been the cause of numerous injuries to the operators. Contact with the live wire, of course, results in a short circuit. How easily such accidents can be averted is shown by a Connecticut man, who has invented and patented the insulated screwdriver shown here. Instead of constructing the handle of wood it is made of non-conducting material. The latter also incases the metal shank to within a few inches of the end. This allows ample surface for the operator to grasp and operate the screwdriver without fear of being electrically shocked by contact with a live wire, and is thus assured of protection from such accidents.—Washington Star.
